

BASIC KNITTING STITCH DIAGRAM 1. CAST ON (Abbreviated 'co')

It's the first step in knitting, and it starts with a slip knot.

Slip knot

Hold the yarn and to make a loop, grab the yarn that's attached to the ball and bring it behind the loop, pull the strand of yarn through the loop. This little loop is called a slip knot.

Cast on

1. Place a slip knot on the ring knitting needle and pull yarn tails to tighten. (Fig. 4-5)

2. Hook the yarn onto your thumb, and pull the loop on your thumb over the needle. Pull down the yarn tail to tighten the new stitch. (Note: Repeat this step until you cast on the required number of stitches, keep those stitches as even and uniform as possible.) (Fig. 6-9)

6. Bind Off (Abbreviated 'bo')

Knit two stitches as normal, then, insert your left needle into the second stitch on your right needle from left to right. Lift that second stitch over the first one. And drop it off the needle. The first stitch stays on the right needle. Knit one more stitch. Lift the new second stitch over the first one and drop it off the needles. Repeat steps, until there is only one stitch remaining. Break the yarn, and pull out the last stitch using your knitting needle. Pull on the tail to tighten up.

7. Tibetan Line

Thread the tail on a needle, and go right through the legs of the knit stitches in between. Pull the tail all the way through, stretch out your knitting, and cut the tail.

2. Knit Stitch (Abbreviated 'k')

The knit stitch is the most basic stitch. Insert the right needle into the coil of the left needle from top to bottom, wrap the thread around the right needle from bottom to top, and pull out the right needle with the thread from back to front to form a new coil. Remove the old coil of the left needle from the needle.

Note:

- When knitting, the working yarn wraps from the back of the right needle to the front. (Fig. 1)
- When knitting, the working yarn wraps from the back of the right needle to the front. (Fig. 2)

3. Purl Stitch (Abbreviated 'p')

Note:

- When purling, the needle enters from the top to the bottom and the working yarn is in front of the left needle. It always stays in the front. (Fig. 1)
- When purling, the working yarn wraps from the front of the right needle to the back. (pic 2)

4. Rib Stitch Knitting (Abbreviated 'rib')

All rib stitch knitting patterns have one thing in common: They alternate purl and knit stitches one way or another and are almost all reversible. The most simple and common version is the 1x1 Rib stitch.

To knit it, you repeat one purl stitch and one knit stitch over and over again.

Note: The pattern will be slightly different with an even and an odd number of stitches.

1. 1x1 Rib stitch with odd number of stitches

Row 1: (Knit 1, Purl 1) across the full row

Row 2: (Purl 1, Knit 1) across the full row

Repeat rows 1+2 until you reached the desired length.

2. 1x1 Rib stitch with even number of stitches

Row 1: (K1, P1)

This is a one-row repeat. So, each and every row you follow the start with the exact same pattern.

5. Add New Colour Lines

At one point or another, you may run out of yarn or change another color. Here's how to do that. Tie a simple knot around the tail of the old yarn using the new yarn. Again, leave a little tail. Slide the knot all the way to the base of the first stitch. Pick up the new yarn/color and continue knitting as before.
